He must also tame the amazing Pegasus to help him in his battles.

But luckily, Perseus is helped by his father Zeus. (There were many powerful gods in the Greek myths, and Zeus was their leader.)

When Perseus comes through all his adventures, he must still save the lovely Andromeda from a terrible monster.

MYTHS

Long, long ago—before TV, movies or even reading—there were storytellers. They'd sit by the fire and make up stories to try and explain the world around them. These myths have come to us from many different countries. Here are two:

HOW FOX AND COYOTE MADE THE LAND

Long ago, there was nothing but fog everywhere. Silver Fox wandered in the fog. "I wish I would meet someone," he thought to himself. And he did.

He met Coyote, who was also walking all alone. "Let's travel together," Fox said. They walked for a while. Then Coyote said, "What will we do now?"

"Let's make the world," said Fox.

"How will we do that?" asked Coyote.

"We'll sing," said Fox.

They sang, up in the sky. They began to stomp and dance in a circle. Fox thought, Clump of earth, come! That is how land got here—by thinking. Then Fox had it in his hand. They still sang and stomped.

Fox threw the clump of dirt and grass down into the clouds. "Don't look down!"

he told Coyote. "Keep on singing, and keep your eyes shut!"

They sang and stomped. Then Fox told Coyote to look down. "The clump of dirt is getting bigger!" said Coyote.

They kept on singing and stomping, and Fox thought and wished, Stretch, stretch. "Now look again," said Fox. "What do you see?" Coyote looked, and said, "Ooh, it's getting bigger!"

Coyote looked again and said, "Now it's

Coyote looked again and said, "Now it's big enough!"

They jumped up and down on the world to stretch it some more. Then they made mountains and valleys and everything else. It took a long time to do all that, but they did a good job!

—an American Indian story

WHY THE SKY IS UP SO HIGH

Way back in the beginning of things, the sky was very close to the earth. Folks could reach out and touch it. They would tear off hunks of sky because it was delicious. In fact, it was the only thing people ate in those days.

Life was easy back then. Everybody ate sky, and spent the day making beautiful things or telling stories.

But the sky got angry. He saw people tearing off big hunks, eating a few bites and throwing the rest on the garbage heap.

Dark clouds filled the angry sky. He screamed, "Do not waste me! Be careful, or I will move away forever!"

After that, everyone tried not to waste the sky-except for a greedy, old woman.

One day she tore off a great big piece of sky, more than she could ever eat. She asked her children and her friends to help her finish it, but they were all full. "Oh well," she said—and she threw the rest on the garbage heap.

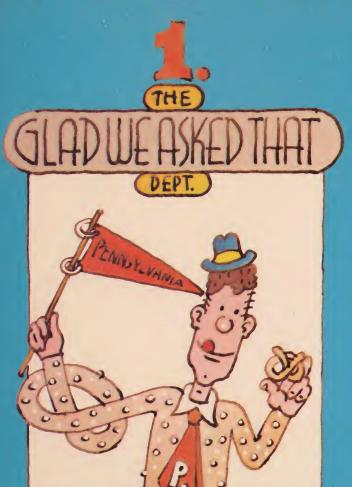

Then the ground shook, and the sky roared:

"Fools! You had no respect for what I gave you. You wasted your gift. I will move far away. You will have to plow the land and plant crops and hunt for your food. Maybe then you will learn not to waste."

And the next morning, the sky was high up, far beyond everyone's reach.

-story from Nigeria, Africa

Make up your own myth about the sea. Write it here:

Ever wonder where the food you eat comes from? Well, we found out where some of our favorite goodies are made.

Minnesota is the frozen pizza capital of the nation. They make more frozen pizzas in chilly Minnesota than in any other state.

And Pennsylvania could change its name to Pretzelvania. Nobody makes more pretzels than Pennsylvania. If pretzels aren't your bag, there's always popcorn. The popcorn you eat at the movies probably made its way there from either Nebraska or Indiana. Those two states are the tops in popcorn. Sunny California has all the states licked in the ice cream business. They scoop out more of the delicious stuff than just about anyone. What do you wish your state was famous for? Write it here:

(Your state)

(What it makes)

Write the answers beside each number in the puzzle. Then, PRESTO! The same words are spelled up-and-down.

Another word for oceans.

A word that's in reach and beach.

Chocolate Fever by Robert Kimmel Smith

Henry Green loved chocolate. He loved every kind: bitter, sweet, dark and light. He ate it every day for breakfast, lunch, dinner and snacks. One day, he was at school and started breaking out in chocolate bumps. Every doctor he went to said he had Chocolate Fever. When they put him in the hospital, he ran away. On his travels, he met a man named Mac. Mac had a friend who had a cure for Chocolate Fever. Vanilla pills! Now he loves...well, you'll have to read the book to find out. I really liked Chocolate Fever. It was a very exciting book.

Thanks to Susan Schmeidler of Delran, New Jersey for this Library Find.

Name That Fish!

What? You don't know what a Lollipop Tang looks like? Not many people do. The Lollipop Tang is one of many strange and colorful fishes that live in the warm waters of the world. People think the colors are beautiful. The fishes think the colors are important. They use these colors to hide from their enemies, to find their friends, or to attract a mate.

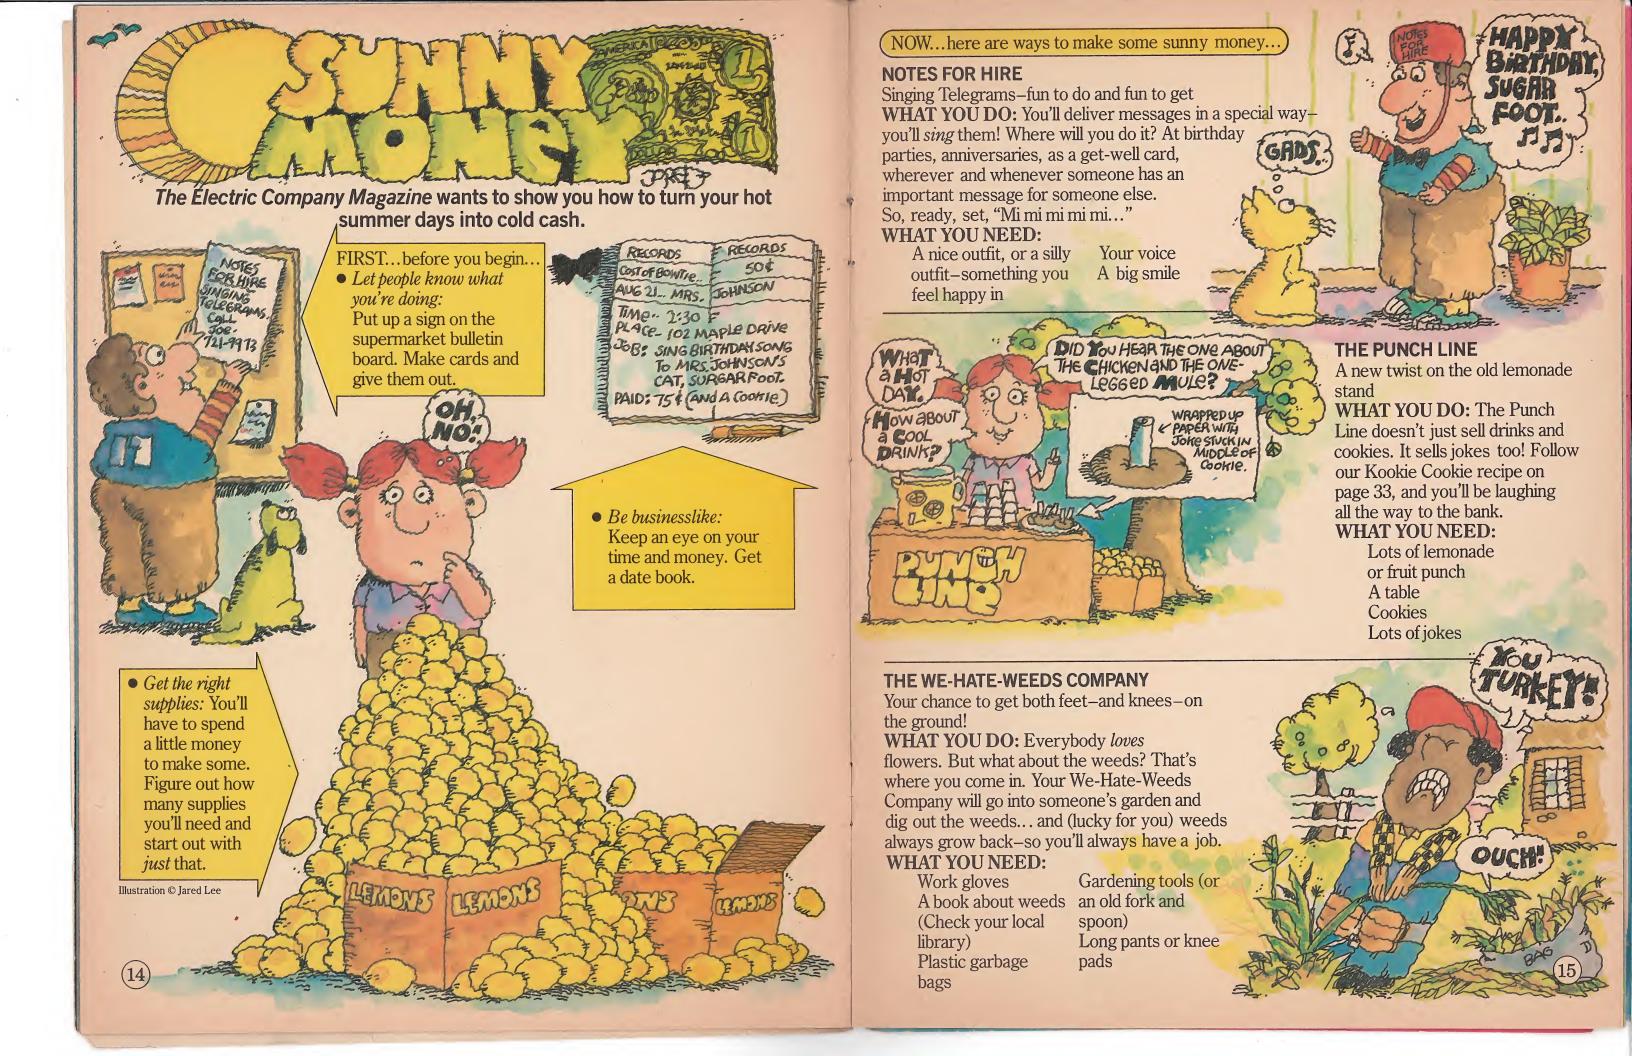

We matched up the Lollipop Tang to his name. Can you draw lines from the other fish to their names? The answers are on page 33.

LET THE SUN SHINE IN!

Choose a sunbeam and race against a friend to see who can reach Earth first. Only a gray cloud can stop you.

It's a hot August day and the sun is shining—or is it? It's up to you: Read the rules below and find out how to Let The Sun Shine In.

RULES

- 1. Cut out the little squares along the dotted lines. You should have 12 yellow squares and 6 gray squares.
- 2. Put the squares in a cup or hat. Shake them up.
- 3. Choose a sunbeam path. Decide who goes first.
- 4. The first player reaches into the cup and pulls out one square.

 If you pull a YELLOW square put it on your sunbeam path, starting at the sun.

 If you pull a GRAY square put it on one of the cloud squares in your path.

 If you fill in all three cloud squares on your path, your sunbeam won't be able to get through.....But if your sunbeam reaches Earth first —you win! (If you fill in your cloud, the other player still keeps picking squares from the cup. The game isn't over until someone's sunbeam

KEEP IT COOL (Page 31)

- 1. FALSE. When you sweat, you're really carrying heat away from your body.
- 2. TRUE. It sounds crazy, but a warm drink makes your body think it's too warm-so your body starts getting rid of heat. You sweat, and you get cooler.
- 3. FALSE. A cold shower makes you cool-but only for a little while. The best
- shower to take is a luke-warm one (not too cold, but not too hot). That lets your body throw off more heat, so vou feel cooler longer.
- 4. TRUE. When you're dirty, it takes much longer for your sweat to evaporate. So the cleaner you are, the faster your sweat evaporates-and the faster you cool off.

KOOKIE COOKIE RECIPE

- 1½ sticks of butter or margarine
- 1 cup of sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon of vanilla
- 2½ cups of flour
- 1 teaspoon of baking powder
- 1 teaspoon of salt
- 1. Mix butter and sugar to make large ball.
- 2. Add eggs and vanilla.
- 3. Add flour, baking powder and salt.
- 4. Mix it all together with fork.
- 5. Put dough in the refrigerator for one hour.
- 6. While dough is in refrigerator, write your favorite jokes on small pieces of paper.
- 7. After an hour, take out

- dough. Roll small pieces in your hands so they look like fat snakes.
- 8. Make a circle out of the "snake," leaving a large hole in the center.
- 9. Ask a grown-up to turn the oven on to 400 degrees.
- 10. Put cookies on ungreased cookie sheet (leaving plenty of space between each cookie).
- 11. Ask a grown-up to put cookie sheet in oven for 6-8 minutes.
- 12. After cookies are baked, let them cool for a few minutes. Roll up jokes and put them in center holes of cookies.
